

FACULTY POSITION
COLLEGE OF ENVIRONMENT AND DESIGN
THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA

PVA#59082

The College of Environment and Design at The University of Georgia invites applications for a tenure track faculty position at the rank of Assistant Professor/Associate Professor/Full Professor beginning in 2010. The successful candidate may also qualify for a university level endowed professorship. The selected candidate will be expected to teach in the new graduate program in Environmental Planning and Design, pursue scholarly research, and provide public service and outreach.

The University of Georgia's College of Environment and Design houses accredited five-year Bachelors Degree and three-year Masters Degree programs in Landscape Architecture as well as a Masters Degree in Historic Preservation. The College is home to the oldest landscape architecture program in the south (1926), the largest in the U.S. and is consistently ranked among the country's top three. In August 2009 the first class of graduate students entered the newly approved two year Masters Degree program in Environmental Planning and Design. There is a large and diverse faculty involved with a wide range of research interests, practice and community service.

The College seeks an outstanding physical planner with the ability to teach core courses in the new program. Imbedded in an outstanding design school, the new program places a strong emphasis on physical planning and design based on influences including environmental, socio-cultural, economic, historic, political, sustainability, and aesthetics. The close professional and academic relationships between Landscape Architecture, Historic Preservation and Environmental Planning and Design also allow for shared coursework and teaching across the College's degree programs. Program "core" courses where the faculty position should focus include Planning and Design Studios, Planning History, Law and Methods, Infrastructure and Transportation, Emerging and Best Practices, and Environmental Design.

Candidates for the position should have earned a PhD in Planning. In addition to the degree in the field, experience in the practice of planning and design and certification (AICP) or licensure in a related field is highly valued. Terminal degrees in Landscape Architecture, Architecture or Law are acceptable in conjunction with extraordinary experience and research/teaching/service abilities. A strong interest in both teaching and research or service is essential.

To apply, submit a letter of interest addressing areas of teaching and scholarly activity and / or creative work, curriculum vitae, and four references with names, addresses, email addresses, and phone numbers. Applicants with practice, creative, or scholarly experience should submit representative samples of their work. Those with teaching experience should submit samples of course syllabi, student work, and course evaluations. Send all application materials in hard copy format to:

Dr. John F. Crowley, Ph.D. FAICP, FASLA
Faculty Search Chair
College of Environment and Design
The University of Georgia
Athens, GA 30602-1845

In order to receive full consideration, all application materials should be received by December 8, 2009. On that date, the search committee will open all applications and begin the selection process.

The University of Georgia is an Equal Opportunity / Affirmative Action Institution.