COMPETITION & EXHIBIT MISSION

Since ancient times, gardens have been places of retreat, beauty and imagination. The Founders Memorial Garden located on the University of Georgia’s historic north campus has been such a place for almost 75 years and commemorates the twelve Athens women who founded America’s first garden club in 1891.

The garden was conceived by the first dean of the landscape architecture program at the University of Georgia, Hubert B. Owens (1909-1985). Its construction began in 1939 from designs by Dean Owens, faculty and students. It was made possible through the generous support of various Garden Clubs of Georgia, and is an important historic and nationally registered landmark.

A vital part of the Founders Memorial Garden’s mission has been to provide educational opportunities for all students of the landscape. This competition and exhibit re-dedicates the use of the garden as a learning landscape, and celebrates its 75 years of continuous service to the college, the university, and the community.
